

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

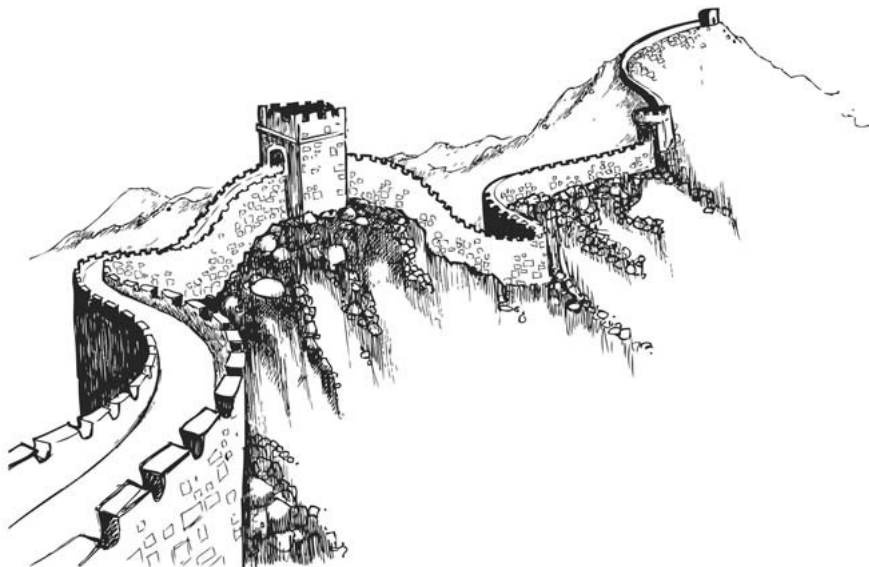

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Describe detailed facts about events or actions in work and social contexts, in written or spoken situations.

Ask your partner:

- What do you know about China in general?
- What can you see and do there?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about two connected events or actions.
- I can report facts about events or actions.
- I can talk about unusual or unique events in life.

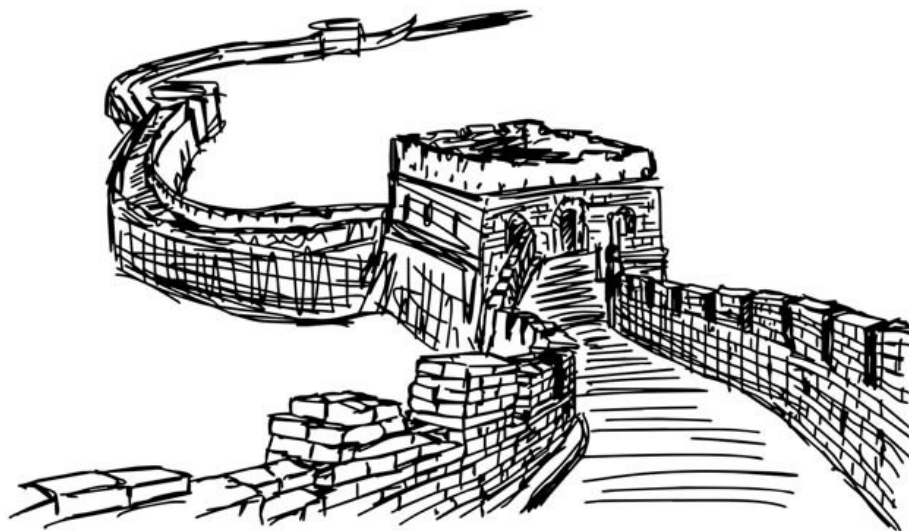

Let's Explore!

The Great Wall of China is a fortification!

* A "fortification" is a military construction used to defend an area.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Have you ever been to the Great Wall of China? Is it on your bucket list? It has just been voted one of the new wonders of the world. The Chinese built this fortification of stone, brick, tampered earth and other materials to protect their states against raids. Starting in the 7th century, the walls have been built and rebuilt until fairly recently.

I have only just returned from a tour there. The huge stone slabs are impressive. How did workers bring them to the site? I'm sure they were not moved easily. They made as large an edifice as anywhere on Earth!

Over the years, watchtowers and troop barracks were erected and other modifications were done. The path along the wall was constructed to be like a paved road. Today, you can enjoy the view while winding through the stunning countryside.

Being adventurous, I wandered miles and miles along it after leaving the tour in the morning. Was this not more breathtaking than any historic site I had been to? Despite wanting to continue on, I returned to my hotel to soak my aching legs. I have never been more elated and more tired than at that moment.

Up to now, how many have considered trying to walk the 6,000 mile wall? Few I would say. Perhaps this was accomplished by sturdier Chinese soldiers of yore. So far, in modern times, people have only made it a few miles. If you haven't thought about trying this up to now, think it over. It may just turn out to be the walk of a lifetime.

Let's Practice!

Walking around the Great Wall of China must be a great experience!

Instructions: Read the story on page 2 again. Select all the true sentences. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- a. The Great Wall of China may not be the largest edifice on Earth.
- b. It has been built and rebuilt for a very long time.
- c. The blog writer was not impressed by this historical site.
- d. She walked for a long time after leaving the tour in the morning.
- e. She didn't want to continue, so she returned to the hotel.
- f. She had never been more tired than at that moment.

Let's Practice!

Anita is asking Jayne if she has ever traveled to the Great Wall of China.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write numbers from 1 to 7 to correctly organize the dialogue. Role play the dialogue with a partner. Read the dialogue aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- _____ I wish I'd known! Did you know that some parts of the walls have been rebuilt recently?
- _____ Not yet. What about you?
- _____ They must look great! Have you unpacked your bag yet?
- _____ Yeah. Look, I bought this for you!
- _____ Oh, really? Why didn't you tell me? I have just booked a ticket to go myself!
- _____ Have you ever been to the Great Wall of China?
- _____ I have just come back from there!

Extension Activity

Read up on the Great Wall of China.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Go online or to the library to find out facts about the Great Wall of China.
- Write down the facts.
- For each fact, use sentences in the Present Perfect tense. Then add a reduced adverbial clause. (Going to the Great Wall of China is something I have always wanted to do. Work on the wall started in the 7th century.)
- Practice reading your sentences aloud so they come out naturally.
- Read them to a partner.
- Look at the sentences together and check for grammatical errors.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I find out facts about the Great Wall of China.

☐
☐

For each fact I use sentences in the Present Perfect tense. Then add a reduced adverbial clause.

☐
☐

I share my sentences with a partner.

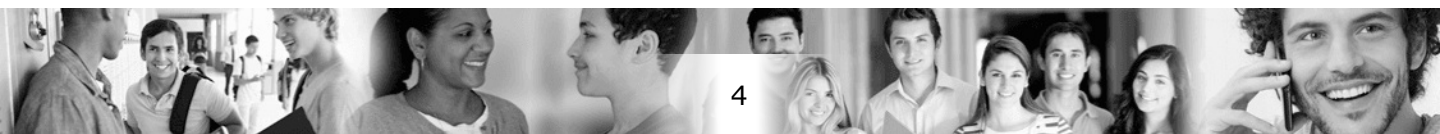

☐
☐

We discuss the correctness of the grammar structures.

☐
☐

Target Words

- to erect (verb): to build
e.g. It was more difficult in ancient times to erect such edifices than it was as time passed.
- bucket list (noun): a list of experiences someone wants to have before they die
e.g. Now that a more modern version of the seven ancient sights is being put together, I will have to start a new bucket list.
- edifice (noun): a building or structure
e.g. It was more difficult in ancient times to erect such edifices than it was as time passed.
- to pave (verb): to cover a surface with something e.g. It was once said that the streets were paved with gold.
- slab (noun): a thick piece of a material
e.g. The houses have been built well with closely-fitting flat stone slabs.
- modifications (noun): changes, adaptations or adjustments
e.g. It is the only ancient town where the whole topographic structure is known precisely as it was, with no later modifications or additions.

Learning Points

Adverbial Clauses: Reduced and Unreduced

Using adverbial clauses makes your speech and writing sound more dynamic and sophisticated.

When you want to express your ideas in a more concise way, you can shorten an adverbial clause to an adverbial phrase.

When you want to describe how something happens or is done, you can use adverbial clauses of manner.

Example:

Being adventurous, I wandered miles and miles.

You use adverbial clauses of time to show when something happens.

Example:

I wandered miles and miles along it after leaving the tour in the morning.

Adverbial clauses of comparison of degree answer the questions how much, how little or how many?

Example:

I have never been more elated and more tired than at that moment.

Look at the chart that outlines what conjunctions go with each clause.

Adverbial Clause	Conjunctions/Adverb
Manner	as
Time	before, after, as, when, while, until, as soon as, since, no sooner than, as long as
Degree	than, as

Before you reduce an adverb clause into an adverbial phrase, make sure that the adverbial clause (subordinate clause) and the main clause have the same subject.

For example: I always take a shower before I go to bed.

Before going to bed, I always take a shower.

Examples:

- Starting in the 7th century, the walls have been and rebuilt until fairly recently.

Learning Points

- They made as large an edifice as anywhere on Earth!
- Today, you can enjoy the view while winding through the stunning countryside.
- Was this not more breathtaking than any historic site I had been to?
- Despite wanting to continue on, I returned to my hotel to soak my aching legs.

Present Perfect vs. Simple Past

You use the Present Perfect tense and the Simple Past tense to refer to past events. The Present Perfect tense refers to actions that happened in the past and have some connection to the present.

The Simple Past passive focuses on the person or things which received a completed past action.

The Present Perfect tense refers to events that happened very recently. In these cases, you use words like just, only just and recently.

I have only just returned from a tour there.

You can use the Present Perfect in questions to ask about past experience or unusual events:

For example:

Have you ever been to the Great Wall of China?

(Notice the use of the word ever in questions.)

You also use words such as yet, up to now, so far and until now when you use the Present Perfect, since these words and phrases refer to a period of time covering the past to the present.

For example:

How many have considered trying to walk the 6,000 mile wall up to now?

Have you packed your bag yet?

(You use yet in negative statements and in questions).

The Simple Past Passive reports about events.

You use the passive form of the Simple Past when the action is not done by the subject but rather to the subject. Often, it is not known who has done the action.

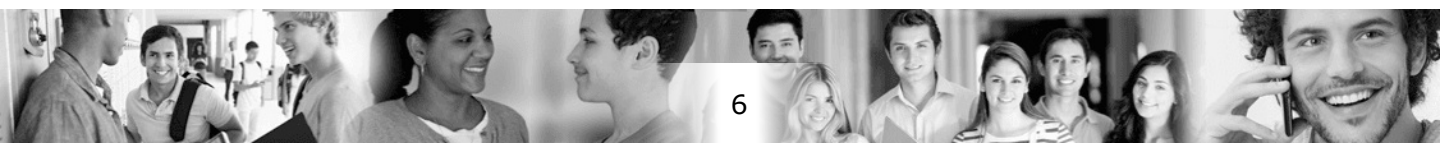

For example:

I'm sure they were not moved easily.

The structure of the Simple Past Passive is:

subject + was/were + past participle

Examples:

Learning Points

- It has just been voted one of the new wonders of the world.
- Starting in the 7th century, the walls have been and rebuilt until fairly recently.
- So far, in modern times, people have only made it a few miles.
- I'm sure they were not moved easily.
- Over the years, watch towers and troop barracks were erected and other modifications were done.
- The path along the wall was constructed to be like a stone paved road.
- Perhaps this was accomplished by sturdier Chinese soldiers of yore.