

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's visit New York!

Learning Outcome

Describe detailed facts about events or actions in work and social contexts, in written or spoken situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about history and civilization.
- I can compare two related events or actions.
- I can report facts about events or actions.

Ask your partner:

- What do you know about New York City?
- What places is it famous for?

Let's Explore!

Thousands of fortunes have been made and lost on the stock exchange.

* "Fortunes" are huge amounts of money.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

For many years New York City has been considered by some to be the greatest city on earth, and has been thought by others to be a giant madhouse. Living in the turmoil that is the Big Apple is as exciting as it gets for some and as difficult as it gets for others. It is certainly perceived to have more of something for anyone who cares to dip their toes into the swirling sea of cabs and people that drift to it.

If you have been sent to New York on business or have been drawn to it for the shopping, art, or Broadway, take to the streets and make up your own mind.

As early as 1860 New York was considered a financial capital - a younger rival to London itself! Manhattan was soon thought by many as the place where money changes hands as fast as the speed of light. The New York Stock Exchange and Wall Street has granted these downtown streets more fame than most.

Thousands of fortunes have been made and have been lost on these streets. It was once said that they were paved with gold. That gold may be the gold of the unlucky whose wealth was lost, sometimes overnight.

Although the skyline has always been defined by New York's skyscrapers, many people have come to prefer the quiet spots in the city. Uptown, where Central Park, bigger than most parks dared to be, was carved out in the late 1880s, people come to canter, ride the carousel or just find quiet. The rumble of traffic and the cacophony from the streets have been deadened. It's as great a haven as you will find anywhere.

Whether you love it or hate it, Manhattan remains more intriguing than most other cities anywhere.

Let's Practice!

Chris looks for New York's history.

Instructions: Match the two parts of the sentences from Column A to Column B. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

COLUMN A

1. As early as 1860 New York was considered ...
2. Manhattan was soon thought by many as ...
3. The New York Stock Exchange and Wall Street ...
4. It's as green a haven as ...
5. Manhattan remains more ...

COLUMN B

- a. have granted these downtown streets more fame than most.
- b. you will find anywhere.
- c. a financial capital - a younger rival to London itself!
- d. intriguing than most other cities anywhere.
- e. the place where money changes hands as fast as the speed of light.

Let's Practice!

Thomas completes Chris's research on New York City.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Circle the correct option to complete the sentences. Read the complete sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. For many years New York City have been considered / has been consider / has been considered by some to be the greatest city on earth.
2. It has been thought / have been thought / is being think by others to be a giant madhouse.
3. If you have been sent to New York on business or has be drawn / have been drawn / has been drawn to it for the shopping, art, or Broadway, take to the streets and make up your own mind.
4. It was once said that the streets were paved / was paved / is paved with gold.
5. Central Park was carved / were carved / was carve out in the late 1880s.

Extension Activity

Go online and watch a tour of New York City.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Go online or to the library to watch a video about New York City.
- Write down as many interesting facts about the city as you can while you are listening.
- Rewrite the facts by reporting them.
- Take your information to class and share it with another student.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I watch a video about New York City.

☐ ☐

I write down interesting facts about the city.

☐ ☐

I reword the acts using the Passive where possible.

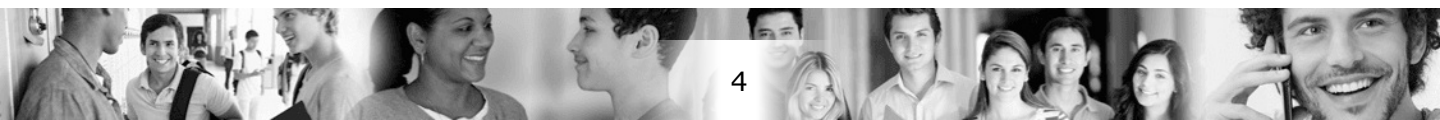

☐ ☐

I share my information with another student.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- madhouse (noun): a hectic and crazy environment
e.g. New York City has been considered by some to be the greatest city on earth, and has been thought by others to be a giant madhouse.
- turmoil (noun): chaos
e.g. Living in the turmoil that is the Big Apple is as exciting as it gets for some and as difficult as it gets for others.
- swirling (adjective): Moving in a twisting and circling pattern
e.g. It is certainly perceived to have more of something for anyone who cares to dip their toes into the swirling sea of cabs and people that drift to it.
- to drift (verb): to move slowly or to be gently pushed by external forces
e.g. It is certainly perceived to have more of something for anyone who cares to dip their toes into the swirling sea of cabs and people that drift to it.
- to pave (verb): to cover a surface with something e.g. It was once said that the streets were paved with gold.
- to canter (verb): to move or walk slower than a gallop and faster than a trot e.g. People come to canter, or just find quiet.
- carousel (noun): (especially American) merry-go-round
e.g. People come to ride the carousel.
- haven (noun): a quiet and safe place
e.g. It's as great a haven as you will find anywhere.
- to change hands (verb): to move from person to person
e.g. Manhattan was soon thought by many as the place where money changes hands as fast as the speed of light.

Learning Points

Adverbial Clauses of Comparison: Degree and Manner

When you compare objects or people to other objects or people, you can use adverbial clauses of comparison.

These make your writing and speaking sound more sophisticated and dynamic.

There are two kinds of adverbial clauses of comparison:

1. of degree

Adverbial clauses of comparison of degree are introduced by the subordinating conjunction than, or by the relative adverb as.

For example:

She is taller than her sister. He is as rich as he is intelligent.

2. of manner

Adverbial clauses of comparison of manner are introduced by the relative adverb as.

For example:

You may do as you like.

It is as I expected.

Examples:

- Apple is as exciting as it gets for some and as difficult as it gets for others.
- Manhattan was soon thought by many as the place where money changes hands as fast as the speed of light.
- As early as 1860 New York was considered a financial capital - a younger rival to London itself!
- The New York Stock Exchange and Wall Street has granted these downtown streets more fame than most.
- Central Park was bigger than most parks dared to be.

Learning Points

Passives: The Simple Past and Present Perfect

You use the passive form of the Simple Past and Present Perfect tenses when the action is not done by the subject but rather to the subject. Often, it is not known who has done the action.

In articles, stories and academic writing, you often use the passive voice. This gives your writing a more sophisticated and dynamic quality.

Look at the chart for the examples of the form of the passive voice of the Simple Past and Present Perfect:

	Simple Past	Present Perfect
Passive	It was once said that they were paved with gold.	For many years New York City has been considered by some to be the greatest city on earth

Sometimes you use the preposition by to mention the person or thing that did the action.

For example:

Central Park was carved out by thousands of workers in the late 1880s.

Examples:

- It has been thought by others to be a giant madhouse.
- If you have been sent to New York on business or have been drawn to it for the shopping, art, or Broadway, take to the streets and make up your own mind.
- Thousands of fortunes have been made and have been lost on these streets.
- Although the skyline has always been defined by New York's skyscrapers, many people have come to prefer the quiet spots in the city.
- It was once said that they were paved with gold.
- That gold may be the gold of the unlucky whose wealth was lost, sometimes overnight.

